ABSTRACT

Compiled to encourage Spanish and Indian-speaking children to communicate meaningfully in English, the bibliography cites books that present a familiar environment and are about famous and successful members of their ethnic groups. The 239 books cited were published between 1926 and 1968. Some citations include annotations, suggested age groups, library classifications, and prices. In addition, the compiler described how a file may be developed, maintained, and kept current to facilitate book selecting, ordering, and shelving. (AN)

INTRODUCTION

During and after Dr. Zintz's talk to the teachers last fall, I thought and wondered how I, as a librarian, could help Spanish and Indian-speaking children communicate meaningfully in English. Obviously, I needed to provide books which would present boys and girls working and playing in their familiar environment as well as books about famous and successful members of their ethnic groups. My five schools had a very limited number of these types of books. Therefore, I compiled a list of about seventy books for children K - 8.

Publishers catalogs and lists of books are difficult to use and keep current. So, I decided that a more usable form would be to have the information on separate cards to permit the addition of new cards. Also, when I make-up my book orders, I have to alphabetize by author's last names and include title, publisher and cost. Therefore, I included all information found on a shelf list card (classification, author, title, illustrator, publisher, publication date, number of pages and connotation) and the reading levels and cost. Reading-interest levels were included to help me in selecting books to round-out each school's collection.

When the books arrive, I can refer to my file for the classification and shelf list card information to type the complete set of cards. Mrs. Hare, the other elementary librarian, has used the cards to order books for Sierra Vista.

Primarily, I wanted books about the Spanish and Southwestern Indian cultures. There aren't very many books available about the Spanish-American culture such as . . . and now Miguel. I included books about the culture in California, Mexico, Spain, Central and South America for a broader scope of the culture and the previously mentioned scarcity. There are many books about Indians and I limited my selections to the Southwestern Indians, except in a few instances, where I felt an exceptional book would contribute depth to the selections. Dr. Morris loaned her collection of Indian books to me and I examined the ones in my schools. I also used published's catalogs, Children's Catalog, 1961 and its supplements, and Subject Index of Books in Print, 1968, vol. I. and II. Several teachers have also told me of books or let me borrow theirs.

This file represents considerable reading and research, and it is not complete, but can be added to and improved. Furthermore, it has all the information which I need to select and order books for each of my schools. And, last but not least, the information is in an easily used form and is contained in an easily moved container so that I can carry it from school to school.
